

Many battered women would be separated from their children for an undetermined amount of time if forced to leave the U.S. Often these women are the sole caretakers of their children. There may be no one with whom the child could stay or they would, might remain in the custody of the abuser. If a battered mother leaves the country, taking her children with her, she could lose custody of the children to the abuser under the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act (PKPA). Forcing these battered immigrant women and mothers to leave the country places their lives and the lives of their children in danger.

We should reinstate our protection of battered immigrant women by allowing them to adjust their status to lawful permanent residency while in the U.S. in the same manner we allow immediate relatives of U.S. citizens to adjust their status. This provision would provide battered immigrant women and their children with approved VAWA self-petitions to acquire their green cards while remaining in the U.S.

Other immigration provisions drastically altered battered women's access to VAWA's suspension of deportation/cancellation of removal in two ways: it changed the way INS counts the number of years an immigrant has been in the U.S. and applies these changes retroactively to cases already filed, and it places a "cap" on the number of immigrants who are allowed to receive green cards through suspension of deportation/cancellation of removal.

To apply for suspension of deportation/cancellation of removal, a battered immigrant or child must have been in the U.S. for three years. Recent changes only count an immigrant's time in the U.S. up to the moment that INS becomes aware of their presence, regardless of how long they remain in the United States for deportation proceedings to conclude. This is especially detrimental to battered women immigrants because in most cases the abuser controls all mail and telephone correspondence addressed to the battered spouse. These battered immigrants may never know that INS had placed them in deportation proceedings. Suspension of deportation/cancellation of removal is an important tool for these women who are unable to file self-petitions for permanent residence because their self-petitions have been sabotaged by spouses who divorce them or who report them to the INS. Suspension of deportation/cancellation of removal is often the only remedy available to battered immigrant women in this situation.

We must restore the original manner of counting years in the U.S. for battered immigrants only. Additionally, we should stop the retroactive application of this new counting and reopen old deportation cases for VAWA-eligible battered immigrants.

Four years ago we passed VAWA strongly believing that battered immigrant women should have access to legal protections, be able to flee violent homes, and control their own immigration status and lives. Let us stand by that position.

TRIBUTE TO FATHER TOM RUSH

HON. HOWARD L. BERMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 21, 1998

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to my dear friend Father Tom Rush, pastor at Mary Immaculate Catholic Church in Pacoima. Father Rush is leaving Pacoima for a leadership position in the international order of Missionary Oblates of Mary Immaculate. Father Rush will be sorely missed in the Northeast Valley. He is a figure beloved by people of all religious and ethnic backgrounds.

I have had the good fortune of being with Father Rush on many occasions. One of the most memorable was earlier this year when I attended dedication ceremonies for the rebuilt Mary Immaculate Church, which was destroyed in the Northridge Earthquake of 1994. The sanctuary was overflowing with church members and others who wanted to share the special day with Father Rush. That day I realized as never before how much Father Rush means to our community. He has touched countless lives through his spiritual guidance, commitment to social justice and dedication to helping at-risk youth.

Father Rush came to the Northeast Valley in 1973, when he became priest at Santa Rosa Church in San Fernando. In between other assignments he spent 13 years at Santa Rosa, before moving over to Mary Immaculate in neighboring Pacoima in 1992. At both Santa Rosa and Mary Immaculate, Father Rush, who is of Irish descent, established an extraordinary rapport with his overwhelmingly Latino congregants. It is entirely accurate to call Father Rush a leader in the burgeoning Latino community of the Northeast Valley.

In recent years, Father Rush has been a courageous and outspoken supporter of immigrant rights. Four years ago he carried an American flag in a demonstration against Proposition 187. In 1995 he was part of a group that met with Richard Rogers, District Director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, to demand a speedier citizenship process. Rogers promised he would try.

Father Rush's pending departure has cast a pall over our community. Though we wish him the best, we also know that he is irreplaceable.

I ask my colleagues to join me in saluting Father Tom Rush, a man of warmth, compassion and remarkable energy who has brought joy and hope to many.
